Chapter 140: The Centillion Shadow Expansion

As the God of Shadows and Life, Sung Jin-Woo's abilities had reached unparalleled heights. His capacity to create and materialize shadows seemed boundless, but his recent endeavors surpassed all expectations. Harnessing his divine powers, he created centillions of shadows—a number so vast that even the multiverse trembled beneath its implications.

The Creation of the Shadow Legion

1. Centillions of Shadows:
Sung Jin-Woo summoned shadows in such unimaginable quantities that their numbers defied mortal comprehension. Each shadow was crafted with care, imbued with unique traits, and tailored for specific roles.

2. Materialization and Invisibility:
The shadows were materialized into living beings using his Materialization Ring, ensuring they were tangible and independent. They were also cloaked in perfect invisibility, enabling them to traverse realms undetected. This ability made them the ultimate spies, guardians, and covert operatives.

3. A Strategic Deployment:
The shadows were strategically spread across the multiverse, ensuring that every realm, dimension, and corner of existence had a silent watcher.

Shadows Manned the Divine Armada

1. Crew of the Warfleet:
Sung Jin-Woo assigned shadows to man the Ultimate Divine Armada, ensuring that every warship, space-frigate, cruiser, destroyer-class spaceship, and space-plane was fully operational. Each shadow crew member was not only a master of their assigned role but also capable of adapting to any situation.

2. Enhanced Functionality:
With shadows piloting the ships, the Divine Armada operated with perfect synchronization. Their invisibility made the fleet even more formidable, as they could approach enemies undetected and strike without warning.

3. An Infinite Force:
Since Sung Jin-Woo's shadows were immortal and self-sustaining, the armada was effectively an indomitable force, capable of perpetual operations without the need for rest or resupply.

The Shadows’ Missions

1. Exploration and Surveillance:
Many shadows were dispatched to explore uncharted realms, gathering intelligence about the multiverse’s structure, its inhabitants, and its threats. Their invisibility ensured they could operate without interference.

2. Guardians of the Realms:
Shadows were stationed across realms to serve as unseen protectors, guarding against invasions, rebellions, or natural disasters.

3. Expansion of Influence:
By spreading his shadows across the multiverse, Sung Jin-Woo extended his influence to even the most remote corners of existence. Each shadow served as an extension of his will, ensuring his presence was felt everywhere.

The Multiverse Under the Shadow’s Veil

The deployment of centillions of shadows marked a turning point in the multiverse’s history. Realms that had once stood independent now found themselves under the watchful gaze of the God of Shadows and Life.

1. An Unseen Network:
The shadows formed an intricate network of intelligence and power, connecting realms and ensuring that Sung Jin-Woo’s influence was absolute.

2. An Unstoppable Force:
With the shadows manning the Divine Armada, the fleet became a moving fortress of unmatched strength, capable of annihilating threats or establishing dominance with ease.

3. A World of Peace and Fear:
While some saw the shadows as protectors, others viewed them as an oppressive force. The multiverse now operated under the implicit knowledge that Sung Jin-Woo’s gaze was omnipresent, his reach infinite.

The Dawn of the Shadow Era

As his shadows spread across the realms, Sung Jin-Woo solidified his position as the supreme ruler of the multiverse. The Shadow Era had begun—a time of unprecedented power, control, and unity under the watchful eyes of the God of Shadows and Life.

The multiverse was now a canvas, and Sung Jin-Woo painted it with shadows, ensuring that no corner of existence remained untouched by his influence. His creations were no longer just an army—they were the very fabric of his dominion, weaving a legacy that would endure for eternity.
